TO" "NANA'S DAUGHTER" is destined to make leep sensation among novel readers. It is a sequel o Zola's world-famous "Nana," but is in many respects superior to that great work. Intense and continuous setion characterizes it throughout, and sortinuous setion characterizes it throughout, and seek of refinement and fine feeling. The aim is to show that evil insticts are not hereditary. Nama is York, who is spending the sum, or here, for instructing them in the art of banunock making. The kind of banunock that she has shown how to construct, is durable, cheap, and being composed of barrel staves, with a small rope stateched to the extrenity of each end, is considerably wider than the ordinary ham-mock. From one to half a dozen of this wort of a prominent personage in the story, but occumore elevated plane than Zola assigns to her. aughter, Andree, is a direct contrast to her. Aban doned in infancy by her mother, she is adopted and brought up by the Naviels, an upwright family be-longing to the working classes. Nana finds her and strives to gain possession of her, her efforts forming the staple of the story. Andree is tempted time and ties of timothy and clover are being put up by Jeff. McCreary, and Benj. Williams. Each of these gentlethe staple of the story. Andree is tempted time and again, and subjected to trials without number, but remains true to her parents by aloption, herself and her betrothed, Lucien Despretz, Lucien's courtship forming one of the most delightful love-idyis ever written. Exciting scenes follow each other in rapid succession, and the attention of the reader is so enchained that it is impossible to put down this volume, which will be read with great pleasure by men will have, in a few days, if favorable weather very one. President Garfield Tells a Story.

Perhaps the President's state of mind may be discovered, from a story be told a friend who called upon him yesterday. In 1875, when the Democrata organized the House of Representatives for the first time, after the war, there was a general elearing out of old clerks, to make places for the friends of Democratic Congressmen. Two old attaches of the House, who had held their places through many Administrations, Mr. Barelay, the Journal Clerk, and Dr. Mahaffy, one of the Reading Cerks, supposed that Congress could not get along without them, and that they were not, therefore, in any danger of removal. Sitting in their arm chairs in their office, Gen. Garfield said, as they blew the smoke from their eigars, they congratulated each other: "Well, it was to be expected, that these poor devis of under clerks would lose their places, but we are solid. Adams, the new Clerk of the House, will never be food enough to turn us out. But one day, as unexpectedly as thunder from a clear sky, came the announcement, that even Barelay and Mahaffy had been removed. Both men immediately put on their hats, and went over to Sanderson's in search of liquid consolation. They drank confrision to Clerk Adams, and the whole Democratic party, and chuckled and laughed, as they called up in imagination the inextrisable tangle into which the business of the House would get, as soon as they left their deaks, and finally, when they were pretty full, they started back to the Capitol, arm in arm. As they best up against the wind across the plaza, Dr. Mahaffy burst out into an immediately in the plaza, by Mahaffy for the tondess of Liberty on the dome of the Capitol, as he shook his infirm finger at it, said: Dy see ther, (hie,) Mahaffy She totters! whe totters! Well, Harelay and Mahaffy have almost been fargetten at the capital, but the Goddess of Liberty on the dome of the Capitol, as he shook his infirm finger at it, said: Dy see ther, (hie,) Mahaffy She totters! well, Harelay and Mahaffy have almost been farge weeks last fall. Tis hoped she will conclude to remain here permanently. I believe there is some hing said about the spoils or the prize belonging to And now come some of our temperance friends who say Christ could not have made fermented wine from fresh water, but would have had to wait for Curtis, the tramp and nuisance, was around, last Saturday. Tom frarely went north again, Sanday. J. Gould has purchased property in Hiawatha; will build there immediately. He will also move his family there, this fall. It is also whispered in the Died, of diphtheria, July 8th, at 5 p. m., Elira, daughter of Thomas and Mary Lyons. Little Lida was the idol of her parents, and the pet of her broth-ers and sister. Three years and a half old, just the age to be the most interesting. How the patter of her little feet and the artless prattle of her tongue will be missed by the sorrowing family! Turning on to pages 80 and 81, I found the following paragraph marked:

"Lewis Wallace, one of Grant's own division commanders, was equally remiss; but he who had been a month on the ground, excused, himself by stating that he had taken the wrong road, marching toward Purdy instead of Fritsburg; yet his troops had helped to build the bridge over Snake Creek for just such emergencies as had occurred. He was, however, set right by Captain (afterward Lieutenant-Colonel) Rowley, and Colonel (afterward Lieutenant-Colonel) Rowley, and Colonel (afterward Major-General) McPherson, both at the time on General Grant's staff. They put him in the right direction at 1 o'clock, and it took him till 7 that night, to march five miles in the direction of the battle, though the camonading was heard at Nashville, a hundred miles away."
